

SLIPPERY REEF KNOT

This knot is tied in the same manner as a reef knot but before pulling it tight, slip one of the ends back through the bight. By pulling on this end the knot can be untied easily and quickly.

SURGEON'S KNOT

Another variation of the reef and the only difference is by having the left end taken around the right end twice instead of once on the first crossing. The double first crossing gives it enough friction to hold until the second can be tied.
